Forecast for Friday 14 May 2021

Weather: Dry overnight with clear skies for most but some patchy cloud forming over some of the eastern fells. This lifting in the morning with most areas having a sunny start to the day. Cloud will then develop during the morning, with one or two showers then forming in the afternoon and evening, though still with a good deal of dry weather around.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 800m: 70% early morning and again later evening with some tops in cloud, but more than 90% during the main part of the day.

Visibility: Away from cloud, generally very good, with only slight reductions in showers. Cloud: patchy at 600m or above in east at first and then more generally above 750m later in evening, otherwise above tops.
